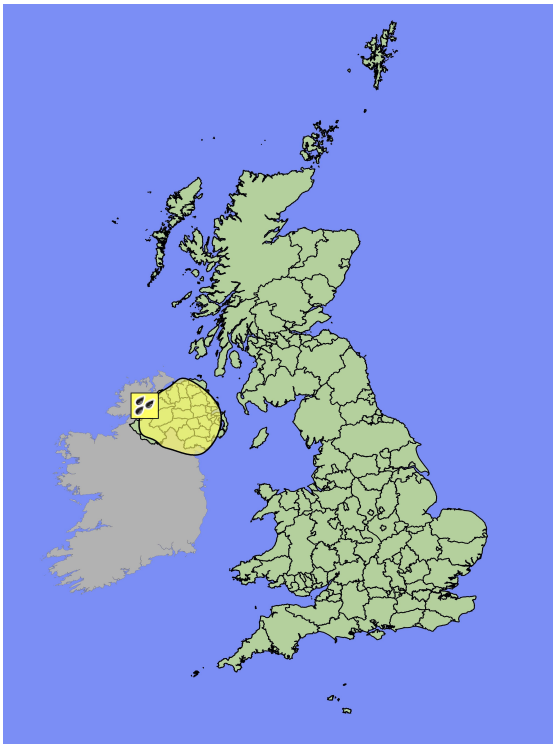
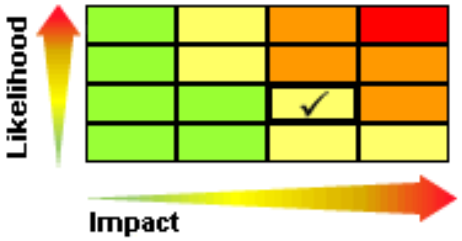
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
10 to 20 mm of rain is expected in places during Friday and while this is by no means excessive, combined with the snow-melt, some problems may occur.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 06:00 on Fri, 25th Jan 2013 until 23:59 on Fri, 25th Jan 2013

Outbreaks of rain will spread across Northern Ireland on Friday, perhaps heavy for a time. Falling on saturated ground and combined with melting of snow cover on higher ground, this brings an enhanced risk of flooding. While the rain may ease later in the day, the associated problems may continue into the weekend. The public should be aware of an increased risk of flooding.
